Streets Are Littered With Bricks as Windstorm Sweeps Over Town Late Monday.

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 13.—Four persons were killed and 40 injured by a tornado which swept Sulphur, Okla., late Monday afternoon, according to word received here.

Early reports declared more than 200 houses and buildings had been damaged and the streets were littered with bricks and other debris. The courthouse was badly damaged.

Telephone and telegraph communication was practically impossible, with miles of wire and poles levelled by the storm.

The disturbance swept from the northern part of Texas and was reported to be moving northeast from Sulphur.

"The town of Sulphur has a population of 3,000, and is 90 miles from here.

Relief parties have been organized to search for any further victims of the storm.

Harvard Fighter
Student Arrested
For Intoxication

Watertown, Mass., March 13.—The arrest for intoxication of Frederick R. Wedge, student at the Harvard graduate school of education, was a matter of formal record in the district court here today. The police blotter containing the latest entry in the spectacular career of "Kid" Wedge, Wisconsin lumber jack, prize fighter, University of Arizona graduate, school principal and student of educational psychology, was brought into court, but the subject of the entry was not. In accordance with the practice of this town, the prisoner was released without arraignment, as a first offender.

Wedge, 42 years old, attracted national attention recently when he was admitted to the Harvard graduate school, a man of letters who had fought his way up from the secondary prize rings. He was in a luncheon room early this morning, the center of a disturbance, when a policeman was called.

At Harvard university today it was said an inquiry would be made into the facts.

Aviator Killed.

Dayton, Ohio, March 13.—Lieutenant F. W. Neidermeyer, Jr., of McCook field, was killed late today when a monoplane in which he was doing combat problems fell several thousand feet in a tail spin. His home was said to be in Columbus, Mo.

Major-General
Peter C. Harris
To Leave Army

Georgian, Now Adjutant General, to Retire From Service on August 31.

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON.
Constitution Bureau.
Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, March 13.—(By Constitution Bureau.)—News that the application of Major General Peter C. Harris for retirement as adjutant general of the army to become effective August 31, 1922, has been approved, will be received with interest in Georgia, where the general was born, and where he lived for a number of years.

General Harris, who is a brother of Senator W. J. Harris, has also been granted a leave of absence with permission to go abroad from April 1, 1922, until the date of his retirement. Colonel Robert C. Davis, infantry, who was adjutant general of the A. E. F., will act as the adjutant general in the absence of General Harris. The secretary of war has announced his intention to appoint Colonel Davis the adjutant general on the retirement of General Harris.

Has Many Honors.

General Harris was assigned to the adjutant general's department in 1912 and appointed adjutant general on September 1, 1918. For his services in this department during the world war, he was awarded the distinguished service medal by our government, the legion of honor (commander) by France, and the order of the crown (commander) by Italy.

General Harris was born in Kingston, Ga., graduating from the United States Military academy in 1888, from the infantry and cavalry school in 1895, and from the army war college in 1908.

During the Spanish-American war, he was nominated by the president for brevet captain for gallantry in battle at Santiago de Cuba, July 1, 1898.

In addition to duty with troops and as adjutant general's department, General Harris has served on the general staff and represented the war department at the Buffalo exposition. Davis is in Pennsylvania.

Colonel Davis is at present on duty in the office of the adjutant general. During the world war Colonel Davis was, first, assistant adjutant general, and later, adjutant general of the American expeditionary forces. For his services as such he was appointed a brigadier general, N. A., and awarded the distinguished service medal by our government, together with other honors.

In addition to duty with troops and as adjutant general of the American expeditionary forces, Colonel Davis has served as adjutant and instructor of infantry tactics at the United States Military academy, instructor and inspector of Philippine scouts, and instructor to the militia of Massachusetts.

Colonel Davis was born in Pennsylvania and graduated from the United States Military academy at West Point in 1898.

WILL GIVE LECTURE ON MUSCLE SHOALS

An illustrated lecture on the Muscle Shoals project will be given by T. H. McCoy at the Baptist Tabernacle on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. McCoy will repeat his lecture at the City Auditorium at 8 o'clock Saturday evening. The subject of the lecture as announced is "The Niagara of the South." Mr. McCoy is heartily in favor of the Ford offer.

ONE SHOALS PLANT
DECLARED USELESS
FOR FERTILIZERS

Expert Tells Committee Plant No. 2 Is Obsolete and Worthless as Fertilizer Producer.

TWO MORE WITNESSES
REMAIN TO BE HEARD

Ford's Whole Fortune Would Go If He Attempted Making Fertilizer at No. 2 Plant.

Washington, March 13.—Charles L. Parsons, consulting chemist and former technical adviser to the government on nitrate fixation, testified today before the house military committee that Henry Ford, any other person or company would "lose their last penny" before they ever produced commercial fertilizer at nitrate plant number 2, at Muscle Shoals, Ala. The plant which has cost the government about $68,000,000, the witness said, was designed to be operated only by the cyanamid process of nitrate fixation, an obsolete method, and was worthless as a fertilizer producer.

The cyanamid process was condemned by Mr. Parsons as obsolete and economically impossible, having been superseded, he declared, by the Haber-improved method. It was his conviction, he added, that the Muscle Shoals plant could not be redesigned to produce commercial fertilizers. This judgment was based, he explained, on a thorough investigation of the cyanamid plant in Europe, many of which were being closed down by bankrupt operators while others had already gone out of business because they could not compete with establishments using the Haber improvements.

Only Value.

As to the future use of the plant at Muscle Shoals, Mr. Parsons recommended that it be kept in a stand-by condition for emergency in wartime and declared that that was its only present value in so far as its worth as a fertilizer factory was concerned.

Contrary to reports, Mr. Parsons declared nitrate plant No. 1, designed to operate by the Haber process, had

$100,000 VERDICT
GIVEN YOUNG BOY

Olif Walraven, Who Lost Both Arms, Appears in Court to Show Extent of Injuries.

Probably the largest verdict ever found by a jury in Fulton superior court was returned in Judge Ellis' division Monday afternoon, when Olif Walraven, 14 years old, was awarded $100,000 damages for the loss of his arms, which were cut off by a street car. The suit was brought against the Georgia Railway and Power company by Hewlett & Dennis, representing the plaintiff, while Colquitt & Conyers appeared for the power company.

The boy, who was in court to show the extent of his injuries, alleged that he was crossing South Pryor street in front of his home at the corner of Buena Vista avenue, when struck by the street car. He claimed that no warning was sounded by the motor-man of the car which struck him.

He told the jury that he got off a northbound car and was going around its rear end when a southbound car struck him. His arms were severed above the elbows and his left ear was torn off, he said. He is said to have been dragged several feet.

The power company contended that the boy fell in front of the car with his hands outstretched across one of the rails and was not struck by the street car.

The accident occurred January 18, 1921. An unusual feature of the verdict was the fact that the jury gave the entire amount asked. The jury was out only 20 minutes in making the verdict.

The power company will appeal the verdict. It was stated at the court house.

Over Wife's Dead
Body, He Defies
Sheriff's Posse

Perry, Ga., March 13.—(Special.)—Defying a sheriff's posse to arrest him or remove the body of his wife, whom he had shot and killed late this afternoon, Stanley Ayler, residing near this city, tonight engaged in a gun battle with the officers until he was wounded fatally at the end of two hours.

When it was learned this afternoon that Ayler had killed his wife, officers from the sheriff's office attempted to arrest him. On arriving at his home they found Ayler had removed the body to a deep pit, which had a thick board wall surrounding it.

He defied the officers to arrest him or to remove the body, shouting: "You can't move her body until after you have killed me."

The officers returned to Perry. Early tonight a posse was organized, and when Ayler's home was again approached, he was still in the pit. Over a hundred shots were exchanged before the slayer was wounded.

He was brought to the Perry courthouse, where physicians stated he is wounded fatally.

$435,000 IS SUM
IN ARMY FINANCE
BILL FOR BENNING

Army Appropriation Bill as Reported Carries $400,000 for Construction at Georgia Camp.

$35,000 ADDITIONAL
URGED FOR SCHOOL

Total Amount in Bill Would Allow Army Strength of Only 115,000 Enlisted Men.

Washington, March 13.—With provisions which would necessitate reduction of the size of the regular army to 115,000 enlisted men and 11,000 officers, the army appropriation bill, carrying $270,303,030.37 was reported today by the house appropriations committee.

The amount recommended for the military and non-military activities of the war department during the fiscal year is a reduction of $110,000,000 from the total appropriated for the current year and $87,000,000.80 less than budget estimates.

As drafted by a subcommittee headed by Representative Anthony, republican, Kansas, the bill would require the return to the United States by next July 1 of all troops stationed in China, 6,500 men from Hawaii, about 2,000 men from the Panama canal zone and all but 500 officers and men in the army occupation on Rhine.

For Camp Benning.

A total of $400,000 would be available, under the bill, for construction of additional quarters at Camp Benning, Ga., and $5,000 more is recommended for the infantry school conducted there.

No limitation is proposed on the number of men to be maintained in the Philippines, the committee's report stating, however, that Secretary Weeks believes that under present conditions "some reduction" can be made in the force there. The contemplated withdrawal, it was said, would leave 5,000 men in the Hawaii islands and a like number in the canal zone. The present actual strength of the army was given by the committee as about 13,000 officers and 132,000 men, exclusive of 7,000 Philippine scouts.

$27,635,200 for Rivers.

An appropriation of $27,635,200 is recommended for continuance of work on various river and harbor improvements for which the chief of engineers requested $43,000,000; $12,331,000 for the air service against $15,000,000 requested and $21,130,200 for the national guard, about $9,000,000 less than budget estimates.

The committee recommended $500,000 for chemical warfare service, declaring that sum sufficient to provide for a minimum amount of development work with present conditions; and for maintaining Edgewood arsenal in stand-by condition. An appropriation of $2,750,000 is recommended.

NATIONAL RELIEF
DRIVE FOR JEWS
GOES 'OVER TOP'

$14,009,624.19 in Actual Cash and Pledges Now in Hand, Announces the National Chairman.

GEORGIA AND ATLANTA
CAMPAIGN TO CONTINUE

Every Cent That It Is Possible to Get Will Be Needed, Declares Victor H. Kreighshaber.

New York, March 13.—(Special.)—Actual cash and pledges totaling $14,009,624.19 in hand, and a total of $17,310,000 assured by April 1, is the record of the national campaign for $14,000,000 for relief of Jewish war, pogrom and famine sufferers in eastern Europe, National Chairman David A. Brown announced tonight in a preliminary report issued by national headquarters of the Jewish relief campaign. Eight of the 48 states are still to complete their campaign. More than $1,000,000 was given by non-Jews, Mr. Brown said, in this enterprise which surpasses any humanitarian effort by the Jews of America.

"This result," says Mr. Brown in summing up, "is surely a wonderful demonstration of human sympathy of which Americans and American Jews in particular may well feel proud."

"Throughout the length and breadth of the land the Jews of America have rallied to the call of their leaders as at no other time during the past seven years."

Will Conclude Campaign.

Mr. Brown made his report public before returning to his home in Detroit, where he will conclude the campaign. He has been at his desk at national headquarters here since the opening of the big drive early last October, when he cancelled a European trip to assume the chairmanship.

"Practically every state," declares the report, "has either raised or exceeded its quota. The only exceptions have been where the economic conditions were such that our people were absolutely unable to raise the money."

The extraordinary character of the Jewish relief is shown in an analysis of previous relief campaigns presented in the report. It says: "Beginning in 1914, there was projected throughout this country a series of campaigns, many of which had back of them the government of the United States, as well as the government of the United States."

GOVERNOR FREES
RAYMOND GLASS

Convicted in Auto Case, He Serves Only About Five Months of a Five-Year Sentence.

Governor Hardwick Monday afternoon signed an order commuting to present imprisonment, which is approximately five months, the five-year term of Raymond W. Glass, of Atlanta, president of the Raymond Phonograph company, with the payment of a $500 fine. The fine was paid immediately and an order from the state prison commission for Glass' release was forwarded to the state prison farm at Milledgeville Monday night.

Five other indictments are now standing against him in Fulton superior court. For two years following his conviction on the charge of having in his possession an automobile, upon which the motor number had been changed with the intent to defraud and to deceive, he fought the verdict.

He was convicted May 12, 1919, and the trial jury recommended that the offense be treated as a misdemeanor. Judge Humphries, the trial judge, at the time stated in view of

Great Floating
Liquor Palaces
Are Now Planned

New York, March 13.—Plans for a floating liquor palace off New York beyond the three-mile limit, are going forward, according to James V. Martin, the promoter, in spite of the announcement of Roy A. Haynes, federal prohibition commissioner, that the vessel will not be permitted.

Furthermore, declares Martin, a second, and possibly a third, liquor palace will be constructed, should the first be successful. In answer to Commissioner Haynes' assertion that he will seek to thwart the scheme, Martin says there is nothing in international law that forbids a resort of this character.

Martin asserts the vessel will be as large as the Leviathan, that it will be constructed in Europe, and that the investment will amount to $10,000,000.

MELLON IS SCORED FOR BONUS STAND
IN FREAR LETTER

Ways and Means Committee Ignores Administration Dislike of Bill and Will Report It.

PASSAGE PREDICTED
BY HUGE MAJORITYWisconsin Congressman
Accuses Treasury Chief
With Attempt to Relieve Burdens of Rich.

Washington, March 13.—Secretary Mellon's letter opposing the soldier bonus bill has drawn a sharp retort from Representative Frear, of Wisconsin, member of the ways and means committee.

Frear explained that he does not attempt to speak for the committee, and then takes Mellon to task for his repeated objections to the bill.

Mellon's great wealth is referred to in connection with a declaration that the sales tax he advocates will shift burdens from the shoulders of the rich.

Measure Reported.

The ways and means committee, meantime, is ignoring Mellon's letter and the reported intention of President Harding to veto the present bill. The measure was altered in one of two minor particulars Monday. It will be considered at a meeting of the entire membership of the committee Tuesday, and thereafter reported to the house.

Frear informed Mellon the bill would pass the house 5 to 1, and also that it would pass the senate, in its present form.

The obligation of congress to care for ex-servicemen can not be avoided, Frear wrote.

"Congress took from their homes, jobs and schools 4,500,000 men and boys and sent them to war to fight for the rest of us at one dollar a day, most of which magnificent sum went for allowances and insurance. Over 500,000 of these men and boys are now reported to be without jobs."

Congress is further confronted with the fact that the millionaires who stayed at home during the war doubled in number, Frear added.

Repeated Opposition.

"And we know that you have repeatedly and publicly expressed your opposition to any soldiers' bonus legislation," he continued.

TREATY OPPONENTS
CONTINUE ATTACKS
ON SENATE FLOOR

But Accept Agreement to Vote Today on First Proposed Reservation to Four-Power Pact.

JOHNSON AND BORAH
LEAD ALL-DAY FIGHT

Borah Again Questions Authorship of Pact, Despite Assurances of Letter From Hughes.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, March 13.—Opponents of the four-power Pacific treaty loosed another series of broadsides against the pact today in the senate, but slackened their onslaught just before adjournment to accept a unanimous consent agreement for a vote tomorrow on the first of the proposed reservations.

Senators Johnson, of California, and Borah, of Idaho, both republicans, took the lead in the all-day attack, the former declaring ratification of the treaty would be a national "surrender" under a threat of danger from the Anglo-Japanese alliance, and the latter asserting that the proposed four-power arrangement would transfer to the Pacific the old balance-of-power system that has dominated Europe for centuries.

A question as to the authorship of the treaty and its supplemental agreements again was raised during the debate, Mr. Borah asserting that, despite Secretary Hughes' letter accepting responsibility for the final draft there seemed to be "the most conclusive proof that somebody else wrote the treaty."

Robinson Reservation.

The reservation on which it was agreed to vote at 4 p. m., tomorrow was proposed by Senator Robinson, democrat, Arkansas, and will be the first issue of the four-power treaty fight to come to a roll call. As modified today by Mr. Robinson it provides that the rights of nations, both in and out of the four-power group, are to be respected, and that non-signatory as well as signatory nations shall be invited to any conference held to consider controversies affecting their insular interests in the Pacific "or any Far Eastern questions."

Administration leaders declared tonight they had sufficient votes to defeat the amendment, which has been touched on very little in debate during the several days that it has been technically before the senate. Senators Johnson and Borah, however, declared they would fight it to the hilt.

U. S. IS HELPLESS TO FORBID STRIKE

Davis, However, Says Government Can Use Powers to Prevent Public Coal Shortage.

Washington, March 13.—The federal government is powerless to prevent the impending coal strike, scheduled for April 1.

Secretary Davis, who for the last few weeks, has attempted to arrange a conference between miners and operators, has assured both parties that the injunction will not be used to stop the coal strike.

But if a strike gets under way, Davis said, and the public is threatened with a coal shortage, the government can go into the courts and ask injunctions against the miners and operators.

The government has no legal authority to compel both sides to enter a conference, he said.

JEALOUSY ALLEGED
AS CRIME MOTIVE
BY PROSECUTION

Mrs. McNiece Springs Sensation in Her Testimony on First Day of Murder Trial.

COART KISSED HER
BY FORCE, SHE SAYS

McNiece "Would Have Dried His Hands in Coart's Blood" If She Had Told, She Says.

BY STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

Talbotton, Ga., March 13.—(Special.)—Love, jealousy, anger and a vain desire for another man's wife were the underlying passions causing Major Lee H. Coart to slay Superintendent of Schools A. B. McNiece last fall—this was the withering attack of the prosecution today in opening the murder trial here, as disclosed through dramatic testimony of the slain man's widow.

Highly nervous from the shock she received Sunday in the A. B. & A. wreck near Atlanta, Mrs. Estelle McNiece told her story of alleged events leading up to the fatal shooting in her husband's office. Robert C. Palmer, leading counsel for the retired army officer, objected repeatedly to admission of her testimony on the ground that no motive was shown for the killing of McNiece by the defendant.

Overrules Objection.

But Judge George F. Munro overruled him each time, and in a faltering voice Mrs. McNiece continued her testimony. Courtroom spectators were surprised as if a thunderclap had just sounded, when she told of an alleged advance upon her by Coart.

"On one occasion," she said, "I went to see Mrs. Coart about a church, entertainment we were to give. I took my papers and the program we had already arranged with me in order to discuss them with her."

"I started walking towards the Coart home, but before going far, I was picked up by friends in an automobile and they dropped me in front of the house."

"I entered the Coart home and called for Mrs. Coart. In response to my call, Mr. Coart walked in from the rear of the house. He invited me into the parlor and then told me Mrs. Coart was not at home, but was visiting among neighbors."

"He kissed me."

"He intercepted me between the library table and door. Catching me in his arms, he kissed me."

"He grabbed me by main force. I begged him to let me go. I was crying and told him if he didn't let me go, I would scream for aid." She paused, leaning forward in the witness chair.

"I started out of the house, and he called me again, saying: 'Celeste, you can not go. I forgot myself, and I want to talk to you.'"

"I sat in the swing on the front porch and cried. I finally regained control of myself and upbraided him for his attack as being degrading."

"He said: 'If simply lost my head, Celeste, and I promise I will never do it again.'"

Striking Witness.

Dressed in mourning, her pretty face showing from beneath black hat and thin veil, partly raised, Mrs. McNiece held the unbroken attention of every spectator. Coart's eyes never left her face as she continued her testimony, despite objections by his counsel.

"This meant a sudden break in mine and my husband's friendship for the Court. I was in a dilemma. If I told Mrs. Court she would lose all of her respect for her husband. "If I told my husband it would mean that he would dye his hands in Mr. Court's blood."

"I left the house resolving that I would keep it a secret. I avoided Mr. Court from then on, and when I visited the Court home I always made it a point to learn in advance that Mrs. Court would be there."

"I love Mrs. Court dearly and our friendship, of course, was never broken, and Mrs. Court visited us three times afterwards and I returned the visits. On the conclusion of the third visit, Mr. Court stated that they were not coming to see us any more until we came to see them. He addressed those remarks to my husband, saying, 'McNiece we are not coming to see you until you come to see us.'"

Before shooting, I was in a drug store buying school books. Mr. Court came in and walked up to me. He insisted I should let him carry my books home and insisted that I should let him walk home with me, as he wanted to tell me something that pertains to all of our happiness."

"I declined to let him walk home with me."

"On the afternoon before the shooting, I was walking home and Mr. Court got out of an automobile and joined me. He insisted that he walk home with me, and I let him do it. He told me that my husband was not true to me. I asked him if he had anything to prove against my husband in the matter of infidelity. He said he had nothing."

Repels Advances. "On reaching the house he asked me should I ever get free from my husband wouldn't I let him know. I promptly told him that nothing but death could separate me from my husband. He left me then."

Attorney Palmer again moved that all of Mrs. McNiece's testimony be excluded, but the court overruled the objection. Mr. Palmer, on the cross-examination, tried to shake the witness and drew from her the details of a party in which she and Mr. Court were members.

It was a picnic given by friends, she said, and that she did not know Court would be present. She stated that she and three other women companions were talking in group, and that Court, when the other ladies had turned their backs, had asked her to write to him when she went on a visit to her home at Lawrenceville, which she was contemplating. She immediately told him "No," she said, and walked away.

The defense in an effort to show that Court had visited the McNieces' home after the alleged advance on Mrs. McNiece, caused the witness to recall that Court had come to the house.

After explaining that Mrs. Court was away from home on a visit, he hinted that he had nothing prepared to eat, she said. She and her husband invited him to take dinner with them the next night, although it hurt her badly to do so, she said.

Condemned Wife. Mr. Palmer fired question after question to her until she told of a conversation between her and Court in which she said Court told her that he did not care a particle of love for his wife, and that he did not care to see or hear from her again, and that he could not trust her.

"He also told me that she is not the sweet, lovely woman that I thought she was, and spoke of her in most uncomplimentary terms," stated Mrs. McNiece. The witness denied that Court had been to her and told her that McNiece was too intimate with his wife, and asked her to keep him from associating with his wife.

When the counsel for the defense insisted on knowing why she did not tell her husband of alleged advances she replied again that it would have meant that "he would have dyed his hands in Court's blood."

She denied that her husband was a desperate man and when the defense continued to hammer away on this subject her eyes flashed as she cried to the attorney:

"Wouldn't you kill a man for that? 'I felt assured that my husband would because he loved me.'"

She asserted that she had married McNiece on October 6, 1912, in Macon, while she was attending Wesleyan college. She and her husband moved to this county three years ago, residing on the plantation owned by Mr. McNiece's mother, she continued, and shortly after they came here they met Mr. and Mrs. Court, becoming fast friends. She went into minor details as to the social activities in and around Talbotton.

Sheriff on Stand. Prior to Mrs. McNiece's taking the stand the state used Sheriff Watkins as a witness. The officer was among those who found McNiece lying on his face in his office after Court had shot him, the bullet entering the neck. McNiece had a broken pencil in one of his hands, he said, which conveyed the impression that he was sitting at his desk when Court entered his office. McNiece refused to make a statement to him at the office, he continued, only saying that it was a personal affair, and that he did not care to discuss it.

The officer stated that Mrs. Court was the first woman who went to Mrs. McNiece to reach the wounded man as he lay on the office floor prior to being removed to Atlanta. He stated that she went from the office to the county jail, and there talked for a few minutes with her husband.

Since that time Mrs. Court has never been to see Court, stated the sheriff. "But," he said, "Mrs. Court's boy had visited his stepfather twice, since he has been in prison."

Solicitor-General McLaughlin in outlining the case to the jury stated that among the numerous friends which Mr. and Mrs. McNiece had made in Talbotton were Mr. and Mrs. Court.

"A mutual friendship developed between the two families," he said, "Mr. and Mrs. McNiece perfectly happy in the love, confidence and respect they had for each other. They did not know but that the same happiness existed in the Court family. They found Mrs. Court to be a true and loyal woman. As time went on Mrs. McNiece discovered that Mr. Court was becoming infatuated with her. She repelled it and avoided him."

"She loved Mrs. Court and was embarrassed by reason of Major Court's infatuation for her. In May, 1922, she had the occasion to visit Mrs. Court at the latter's home. Finding the house open, she went in at the same time calling for Mrs. Court. To her surprise Mr. Court came from the backyard into the house and stated that his wife had stepped over to a neighbor's house."

"As Mrs. McNiece started to go Major Court seized her and tried to drag her into a bedroom. She began to cry and struggle to free herself, telling him she would scream if he did not turn her loose. He acted like a mad man and finally she got loose and left. She decided not to tell her husband or Mrs. Court because she knew if she did there would be a tragedy. He was a desperate man."

The courtroom was crowded to its capacity this morning when Judge Munroe reached for his gavel. It was gone. The sheriff went out across the street to a store to get the court's wooden weapon, and at 9:30 o'clock the first step was taken to secure a jury. Two hours later the last of the twelve men stepped in the box from out of a total of seventy jurors drawn.

The jury. There was but one man in the entire lot that was opposed to capital punishment.

The jury is composed of J. E. Mathis, J. T. Cook, R. B. Burt, Alvin Moran, R. L. McBride, J. R. MacDaniel, W. A. Beverly, John Brady, J. H. Fowler and L. H. McCarry. All of the men are farmers, most of them being elderly men. Mr. Court appeared to be cheerful in court. He was dressed neatly, wore a suit of somewhat discolored when Mrs. McNiece took the stand. During a short recess he talked to newspaper men on various subjects, but would not discuss the case. Mrs. Court was not present, it was stated. Her relatives are sitting with Mrs. McNiece, around the table for the counsel for the state.

Sitting directly in the rear of the defendant this morning and afternoon were Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Williams. The latter is his sister, of Columbus, where Court was reared and is prominently connected.

ONE-STATE RAILROAD IS NOT UNDER I. C. C.

Washington, March 13.—The interstate commerce commission was held by the supreme court to be without authority to authorize or compel the abandonment of a strictly state railroad.

The decision, which was handed down in a case brought by the state of Texas against the Eastern Texas railroad company to prevent that railroad from dismantling under an order issued by the commission, has cleared that where a railroad lies entirely within a single state, is owned and operated by a corporation of that state and is not a part of a line, and where its continued operation cannot be of more than local concern, the commission was without jurisdiction.

German Princess Asks Legal Action Against Publishers

London, March 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—Princess Eitel Frederick and his wife have requested the government to demand that the publishers of the Hohenzollerns' affairs to proceed against disseminators of the story published in England and the United States that the princess had confessed to misconduct with the Baron Plettenberg, says a Berlin dispatch. Eitel and his wife say the story is untrue. They admit that the princess testified about a month ago at the first hearing in the divorce case brought by the Baroness Plettenberg, in which she is named as co-respondent, but declare that her testimony was exactly opposite to that ascribed to her. All divorce cases in Germany are heard in private.

$435,000 IN FINANCE BILL FOR BENNING

for supplies and equipment of the reserve officers' training corps and $1,800,000 for civilian military training camps.

The bill carries $7,740,000 for the ordinance department to meet, in addition to other expenses, the cost of maintaining a skeleton force of armaments "to keep alive the knowledge of the method of manufacture."

The amount carried in the bill for seacoast fortifications, the committee reported, would not provide for any new projects, but would go entirely for maintenance of existing fortifications and for continuing the construction of a limited number of seacoast guns.

The total recommended for river and harbor improvements, about $15,000,000 less than the amount sought by the chief of engineers, is carried as a lump sum and projects on which work would be continued are not specified. None of the appropriations will go for new projects, however.

For subsistence of the army the committee recommended $16,550,000, approximately $13,000,000 less than last year's appropriation. The decrease being brought about by a reduction to 30 cents per ration.

The subcommittee which spent three months in holding hearings and framing the bill reported that "the excessive cost of maintaining the regular army over pre-war expenditures" was found to be largely due to the "expensive methods of its administration."

Commenting on the cost of maintaining troops on the Rhine, the committee calls attention to Germany's failure to pay the cost. The committee also declared that "no adequate reason has been shown for the maintenance of any troops in China."

The bill also provides $8,670,000 for prosecution of flood control work on the Mississippi river and $100,000 for similar activities on the Sacramento river.

Switzerland is believed to have a greater proportion of the nation's any other civilized nation, about 245 to each 100,000 residents, compared with 70 elsewhere in Europe and 68 in America.

ONLY ONE JUROR CHOSEN MONDAY TO TRY ARBUCKLE

San Francisco, Cal., March 13.—One juror temporarily passed was the record of the first day's session in the third trial of Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle on manslaughter charges arising from the death of Virginia Rappe, movie actress, and one of the guests at a party given by him here last Labor day. Miss Rappe succumbed September 10, and Arbuckle was arrested the day following for murder, the charge later being reduced. Six veniremen were examined. Four were excused for having opinions. One proved satisfactory to both sides and the sixth was still under examination at adjournment. When court convened it was found that 14 members of the jury panel were missing and a recess was taken until after lunch so that the sheriff's deputies might round them up. Most of these were on hand when court reconvened.

WELDON TALMADGE BURIED IN ATHENS

Athens, Ga., March 13.—(Special.) Funeral services for Weldon Chase Talmadge, 21, who died Sunday following an operation for the removal of an abscess at a local hospital, were held from the residence, 495 Wadell street, this afternoon, conducted by Rev. H. Linton Porter, of the First Christian church, of which the deceased was a member, and assisted by Rev. Walter Anthony of the First Methodist church.

Interment followed in the Oconee cemetery, the services at the grave being in charge of the Athens Masonic lodge. The following gentlemen acted as pallbearers: Robert McWhorter, Howard McWhorter, Norman Nickerson, Sam Nickerson, George Florence, Dan Bishop, Carswell Mayne and Francis Price. Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Allen H. Talmadge; a brother, Allen H. Talmadge, Jr., and four sisters, Mrs. T. H. Nickerson, Jr., and Misses Frances, Marion and Maude Talmadge.

TWO NEGROES SOUGHT FOR SHOOTING AFFAIRS

Ed Pounds, a negro living at 47 Hills avenue, was being sought Monday night by the Atlanta police on the charge of firing five shots from an automatic pistol on Hollins street. One of the shots struck Orie Robertson, a negro, with whom it is said Pounds had quarreled.

Call Officers Goode and Dodd were detailed to investigate.

A second shooting affair broke the stillness Monday, as a result of which Cora Norman, a negro woman, was brought to the Grady hospital for surgical treatment with a bullet wound in her thigh. It is asserted by the police that the woman was shot by her husband, who lives at 217 Little street.

Officers investigating the case state that the firing was accidental.

In addition to a suggestion that it might be called Alcoholic, Chinese opium circles may know it as Hoppwood.—Pittsburg Post.

Reserve Bank Par Clearance Rule Upheld in U. S. Court

Opinion Is in Favor of Bank on All Essential Points Raised, Says Hollins Randolph.

An opinion which is far-reaching in its effects on the relations between the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta and country and non-member banks in this district was handed down by Judge Beverly D. Evans, in the federal court Monday morning. Judge Evans, in his opinion, declared that the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta is not a member of the Federal Reserve system and that the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta is not a member of the Federal Reserve system.

Although the country banks were granted a right to a writ of injunction against the inclusion of their names on the list without their consent, they were not granted an injunction in the matter of any other contention.

Statement by Randolph.

The opinion is a great victory for the bank, declared Hollins Randolph, attorney for the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta and the leading counsel in the case just decided. The opinion is one in favor of the bank on all the essential points raised in the case and is also a judicial vindication of the several positions taken by the officers and directors of the Federal Reserve bank since this matter of par remitting first arose.

From the evidence in the case, which he has held under advisement since the January term of the federal court, Judge Evans found that the par clearance system was not begun with an ulterior motive. He held the charges are untrue that the reserve bank has accumulated large amounts of checks on country or non-member banks to present them at one time, so as to compel the plaintiffs to maintain so much cash in their vaults as to drive them out of business.

Coercion was charged. It was contended for the plaintiffs, the American Bank and Trust company and others, that this method has been used to force the country banks to agree to remit at par. This contention was not sustained by the evidence, it was stated in the decision.

Summarizing his decision, Judge Evans stated that the evidence did not show that the Federal Reserve bank has acted illegally or in such a manner as to oppress or injure the country banks.

Attorneys for the country banks, which are more than 100 in number, declared Monday that the decision is unsatisfactory to both sides, claiming that both sides have been denied important contentions.

Alexander W. Smith, of the law firm of Smith, Hammond & Smith, attorneys for the country banks, intimated that there would be an appeal to the supreme court of the United States immediately.

Opinion of Smith.

"While the court has decided against the country banks in important contentions," Mr. Smith said, "the banks feel that in denying the right to place their names on the par clearance list without their consent the court has very seriously crippled the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta in enforcing the par clearance rule in this district."

Alexander W. Smith, Orville A. Park, Smith, Hammond & Smith were counsel for the country banks. Hollins N. Randolph, Robert S. Parker, John W. Davis and Montgomery B. Angell were attorneys for the Federal Reserve bank.

The case was filed in January, 1920, in the Fulton county superior court. After considerable litigation it was agreed to the supreme court of the United States, where it was dismissed on motion of the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta, after it had secured several reversals.

Judge Evans' decision.

This case was heard by me on its merits, and, after argument and due consideration, I find as follows:

1. Under sections 13 and 16 of the Federal Reserve act, the Federal Reserve banks are empowered to accept and deposit checks payable on presentation, when deposited with them for collection.

2. Checks thus received must be collected at par. The Federal Reserve banks are not permitted to accept in payment of checks deposited with them for collection an amount less than the full face value of the checks.

3. In the discharge of its duties with respect to the collection of checks deposited with them, and with respect to performing the functions of a clearing house, the Federal Reserve banks are empowered to adopt any reasonable measures designed to accomplish these purposes.

To that end, a Federal Reserve bank may send checks to the drawee bank directly, for remittance through the mails of collections without cost of exchange. If the drawee bank refuses to remit without deduction of the cost of exchange, it is in the power of the Federal Reserve bank to refuse to accept the checks.

4. The process of the daily collection of checks in the exercise of the clearing house functions, is not rendered unlawful because of the fact that, of the checks handled, two or more of them may be cashed by the drawee bank.

It is a legitimate feature of the clearing house function of a Federal Reserve bank to prepare a par clearance list, a list of banks on which checks are drawn that will be collected at par by the Federal Reserve bank.

As a conclusion may be drawn from the appearance of a bank's name on the par list that it agrees to remit at par, or has agreed to enter the par clearance system, I do not think it proper to include the name of any non-member bank unless the non-member bank consents.

I see no objection to including in the par clearance list the names of towns or cities, with a representation that the Federal Reserve bank will not collect checks drawn on any bank (member or non-member) in such towns or cities.

In the discharge of its par clearance function, I find that the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta is not in violation of the Federal Reserve act.

Specifically, I find that the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta is not in violation of the Federal Reserve act in its practice of collecting checks drawn on non-member banks at par.

Mild Epidemic Of Flu Seizes Atlanta Again

Although manifesting itself in milder form, another epidemic of influenza has seized Atlanta, Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, stated Monday that the disease is again widespread here, but of a less malignant type than heretofore, and hasn't increased the pneumonia death rate.

Physicians began reporting reappearance of the flu five or six weeks ago. The number of cases have steadily increased until the epidemic stage has been reached and practically every section of the city is affected.

Dr. E. Stone, who resides in the third ward, said Monday that he is seeing more cases of influenza than during the first big epidemic of 1918.

The 1918 epidemic started in the fall and continued until the next March. The disease returned to Atlanta again in February, 1920, and in February, 1921. Its reappearance this year was in February.

DECATUR CHARTER WILL BE STUDIED

Decatur, Ga., March 12.—(Special.) Study of the charter under which the Decatur city government is operating will begin by the members of the Oakhurst Civic League at its regular meeting in the Oakhurst school building tomorrow evening.

Another feature of the meeting will be the final report of the committee, of which Fred Cooley is chairman, that has completed a detailed and comprehensive religious survey and census of that part of Decatur that formerly constituted the town of Oakhurst.

The cardinal purpose of the league is to promote the development of the Oakhurst section and the city of Decatur as a whole, to promote the city

PEACH FESTIVAL OPENS TUESDAY

10,000 Visitors Expected in Fort Valley for Annual Celebration—Hardwick to Speak.

BY RODERICK HUESER, Constitution Staff Correspondent.
Fort Valley, Ga., March 13.—(Special.)—Hundreds of persons from different sections of Georgia and points in South Carolina arrived in Fort Valley today to attend the first annual peach blossom festival celebration which will be held Tuesday.

The peach blossom festival, which will become an annual affair, is similar to the cherry blossom celebrations in Japan and will rival the Oriental festival in brilliance.

Plans Completed.

Plans for the festival have been completed after many weeks of hard work on the part of several hundred of Fort Valley's citizens, who have had charge of the arrangements.

will deliver an address at 1 o'clock from a raised platform on Oakland heights where the festival will be held. In addition to the governor many other prominent Georgians will make short addresses. Emmett Hunter will introduce the chief executive.

Robert Braswell and Miss Thelma Wilson, who were elected king and queen of the festival by a popular vote, will ride upon an artistically and brilliantly decorated float and will be dressed in robes of splendor.

10,000 Expected.

Visitors, who are expected to number around 10,000, will be given a ride through the peach section, where thousands of trees now are in full bloom, beginning at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. At noon an old-fashioned Georgia barbecue will be served.

Several hundred people will participate in the program and music will be furnished by the Shriners' band, the six society symphonies of Macon, and the Fort Valley community orchestra.

Log for Trip.

Motorists going toward Jonesboro and points further on are warned to take the following route out of Atlanta, as the Dixie highway is closed at Mount View, and detour is barely passable.

The following route is not all in good condition, in fact at least one place has been very difficult, but no further rainfall takes place no difficulty in passage will be had from now on. The Constitution official single six Packard Pathfinder was recently driven over every possible route from Atlanta to Jonesboro, and the one covered by the accompanying log is recommended.

BILL IS INTRODUCED ON FARM LOAN BONDS

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON
Constitution Bureau,
Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, March 13.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Congressman J. W. Overstreet, of the first district of Georgia, today introduced the following bill in congress:

"A bill to extend redemptive privileges to farm loan bonds, promote their sale, and for other purposes."

"Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America, in congress assembled, Section 1: That any bank of the federal reserve system may buy or sell farm loan bonds; any member bank of said system may accept time drafts against a deposit of such bonds as security for the loan; any member bank thus made, or the direct obligation of such bank, maturing within ninety days when accompanied by farm loan bonds as collateral security, not less in face value than the amount of such direct obligation, shall be eligible for discount by the federal reserve bank."

In commenting upon the bill, Mr. Overstreet said:

"I have discussed the merits of this bill with a number of bankers and financiers, and they can see nothing unsound or impracticable in the proposition. You see, that would create immediately a demand for the bonds by the banks and by investors generally, and open an unlimited field. People could put their money in these bonds and it could draw interest; banks could put their secondary reserves and have that draw interest, because they know they could take this paper, secured by these bonds, and obtain circulating notes from the federal reserve bank when needed. And if you help the farmer by lending him money he needs, you help everybody else, of course, and conditions would speedily improve."

SINGING BEE PLANNED AT CHURCH MEETING

The Adult Bible classes of the Druid Hills Methodist church will give an entertainment at the church beginning at 7:45 o'clock on Tuesday evening.

An attractive program has been arranged which includes a "singing bee." On one side will be all of the members whose names begin with letters running from A to J who will attempt to outsing the members whose names begin with letters from K through Z. Prizes will be awarded to the winners, after which refreshments will be served.

The committee in charge of arranging the entertainment is composed of Press Huddleston, Bob Hayes, Dr. Paul Key and Mrs. J. C. Oliver.

20,000 BALES SIGNED IN "VICTORY DRIVE"

Reports from eight counties received last night at the headquarters of the Georgia Cotton Growers' Co-operative association indicated that the "victory week" drive had begun with a sign-up close to 20,000 bales for the first day. More than 1,250 farmers in 78 counties launched the intensive campaign before breakfast Monday morning, according to reports.

The outcome of the week is expected to determine the success or failure of the co-operative cotton marketing movement in Georgia. Eight thousand growers have already pledged approximately 120,000 bales to the state pool, and the volunteer workers expected to sign up the 70,000 still required.

Must Sign 200,000.

Unless 200,000 bales, based on 1920 production are signed up on legally binding contracts by April 1, none of the contracts will be valid and the Georgia pool can not be formed.

A team of two or three farmers each who have signed the contract has been assigned to each of the 78 counties. Throughout the state this simultaneous sign-up is being conducted by farm-to-farm solicitation.

The activity in Georgia is a part of a south-wide program for remedying the ills of the cotton market problem. The plan includes a legally binding contract compelling each member to deliver all the cotton he produces during the years 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926 to the association. When, under the direction of the board of directors, expert cotton classifiers are employed to grade and staple the product, warehouses are leased to store it, money is borrowed on warehouse certificates, and the cotton is sold in an orderly, systematic manner as demanded.

Will Stabilize Price.

Adherents of the plan claim that it will tend to stabilize the price of cotton by eliminating speculation and by eliminating the system of "dumping" on the market immediately after picking in the fall.

Six states have thus far organized under the plan and have formed a national organization known as the American Cotton Growers' exchange, Texas, Oklahoma, Mississippi, Arizona, Arkansas and North Carolina comprise the present membership of the national association.

Urging every man to do his share toward making Georgia the seventh state organized, a stirring appeal was sent out from the campaign headquarters yesterday to every man who has thus far signed the contract.

"This week is a week of fight," said the message. "It will be the most important week that Georgia agriculture has ever known. Only a few days more remain to the close of the campaign, and we still lack a number of thousand bales of going over the top."

"Whether the farmers of Georgia are to have a co-operative cotton marketing association depends on the outcome of victory week. During this period of time it will practically be determined whether or not we cotton growers are to control the marketing of our own product or whether we shall continue to be dictated to by the hordes of middlemen and speculators who at present control the marketing cotton."

DR. CURRAN TO SPEAK AT KIWANIS LUNCHEON

Dr. J. C. Curran, president of the Curran School of Mental Efficiency, of Chicago, will address the weekly Kiwanis luncheon Tuesday, it was announced Monday by Forrest Adair, who will preside.

To boost the club's standing in a national attendance contest, each member will be responsible for the attendance of the member whose name immediately precedes or follows his own on the printed membership roster. The luncheon begins at 12:30 o'clock.

directors Monday. He has been connected with the steel company for sixteen years, and when promoted to the presidency was holding the office of vice president and treasurer.

Mr. Gregg will succeed Thomas K. Glenn, who resigned to accept the presidency of the Trust Company of Georgia, to which office he was recently elected.

The new head of the steel company was born in Atlanta, and is the son of the late W. A. Gregg, of the Beck & Gregg Hardware company. He graduated from Georgia Tech in 1905 and at Cornell university in mechanical engineering in 1906. He is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Mr. Glenn, the former president, was elected chairman of the board of directors Monday. The other officers were elected at the annual meeting held recently.

Mr. Gregg will continue to serve as treasurer, which office is consolidated with the new presidency.

MRS. HOLLINGSWORTH DIES AT AGE OF 83

Funeral services for Mrs. R. H. Hollingsworth, the mother of Judge W. B. Hollingsworth, of Fayetteville, Ga., who died at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon at her residence, at 385 Flat Shoals avenue, will be held at the Martha Brog Memorial church at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. Interment will take place at the Marten cemetery at Lithonia, Ga.

At the ripe old age of 83, she was still the constant companion and adviser of the young people of the community and her death is deeply mourned by many friends.

Mrs. Hollingsworth is survived by three children, Judge W. B. Hollingsworth, of Fayetteville; W. H. Hollingsworth, of Lithonia, and Mrs. R. S. Ellis, of Hartsburg, Ga.

The Message of The Wooden Indian

JUST a few years back there stood a Wooden Indian in front of at least one progressive tobacco store in every sizable town.

This Wooden Indian offered with stony stare to the chance passer-by a certain brand of cigar. With the coming of progress and 1922, the dummy Indian has passed away, and with him, his cigars.

For this is the day of Go-Getters. The man with selling methods like those of the Wooden Indian will soon pass out, too. Go-Getters are using Printed Salesmanship—their ablest ally. It goes where it is sent, and gets results, at small cost, too.

Co-operation with Go-Getters of Business is proving the spirit of Webb & Vary printing. It predominates in those selling features which make better printing worth while, and shows the day of the Wooden Indian is but a memory of the past.

Break off from the stony stare; be human in your Printed Salesmanship.

An estimate wanted by 2 o'clock today!

A man wanted to get a catalog printed at the lowest possible price. He wrote out requests for estimates and mailed them at night to nearly every printer within a radius of a hundred miles. These letters demanded a bid for the work by two o'clock of the same day the letters would be received.

His idea was that some printer, figuring in a hurry, would make a mistake and put in a bid for less than the job should properly cost.

That may be one way to buy printing. There is a better way. Deal only with a good printer who appreciates that the work he is doing for you is expected to help sell your goods.

If your printing builds sales for you, you can afford to pay the right price for getting it done.

Better Paper is a step toward better printing, and better printing is a step toward better selling.

Poor printing is not a step toward anything but ugliness and waste.

Important Resolutions Mark Woman's Club Meet

Calling for adoption of some definite zoning plan and urging reduction of gas and electric rates, the Atlanta Woman's club at the regular monthly meeting at the clubhouse Monday afternoon with Mrs. B. M. Boykin, president, presiding, adopted two important resolutions.

The first of these resolutions was to the effect that a zoning plan should be adopted. Mrs. Boykin stated that although a committee from the Woman's club had been present at a recent meeting of the zoning committee at city hall, the club had not made a sufficient study of the plan to recommend adoption of any specific plan but had seen enough of the billboard and the hot-dog stand in the midst of residence sections to know that some zoning plan was badly needed.

Mrs. Omar F. Elder is chairman of the resolution committee and presented the resolutions, which were both indorsed by the club.

The second resolution was to the effect that the Georgia Railway and Power company be approached concerning a reduction in the gas and electric rates.

Nominating Committee.
Announcement was made of members of the nominating committee, these having been elected at the last meeting of the club but not having been previously announced. The committee consists of Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, Mrs. John McEachern, Mrs. Stafford Seidel and Mrs. R. M. Striplin.

Mrs. Boykin announced that Congressman Upshaw would make the dedication on the occasion of the opening of the Woman's club auditorium April 17.

Mrs. Henry F. Scott, for many years an active member of the Woman's club, was presented with a life membership by Mrs. Boykin, who introduced her to the meeting. Mrs. Scott made a gracious speech expressing her appreciation. Mrs. Boykin announced that Mrs. John Aldridge was also to have been a life member and a letter had been received from her expressing her thanks.

Fund Is Raised.
Mrs. Boykin made a plea for starting women and children in the club and $32 was collected and turned over to Mrs. Victor Kriegerbaum, whose husband is heading the relief drive.

Two propositions for raising more were discussed. Mr. Hills, representing the Southern Cotton Oil company, said that his company would give the club a commission of 5 per cent of more, according to the amount of paint sold through the club, and Mrs. Boykin announced that the Mercer Coal company would pay the club 25 cents on every ton of coal ordered through its members. Mr. Hills presented a check of $50 from his company.

Telephone Demonstration.
An interesting feature was the lecture by G. C. Bowden, district manager of the Southern Bell Telephone company, and illustrated by young women on the switchboards.

George Cromwell Blower, memory expert, gave an interesting talk concerning the psychology of memory. The meeting was concluded with the reading by Mrs. Roger A. Wilson of the "Madonna of the Tubs."

Announcements Made.
Interesting announcements included that of Mrs. T. T. Stevens, chairman of the education committee, that the committee would present Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen at the Metropolitan theater on the morning of March 23 for the benefit of the committee's educational work, mainly the pledge of $1,000 to the Tallulah Falls Industrial school and scholarships at the University of Georgia and their other work.

Mrs. Omar F. Elder, chairman of the resolution committee, announced a benefit bridge party to be given at the clubhouse March 21 for the auditorium fund. Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, chairman of the study class, announced that the Wednesday meeting would be on Portuguese and Spanish dramatics.

Mrs. John Boyles will sponsor a benefit bridge party to be given at the clubhouse.

Auditorium Opening.
Mrs. Murray Hubbard, chairman of the auditorium committee, announced that the dedication of the new auditorium would be given at the clubhouse March 21 for the auditorium fund. Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, chairman of the study class, announced that the Wednesday meeting would be on Portuguese and Spanish dramatics.

Heath-Reiss Wedding Event Of Wide Interest

At a beautiful home ceremony at Columbia, S. C., Saturday afternoon at 6 o'clock Miss Melissa Austell Heath, only daughter of Mrs. William Austell Heath, became the bride of Lieutenant Herbert Joseph Reiss, U. S. A. The whole lower floor of the Heath residence was a bower of roses, lighted by softly glowing candles, and there were assembled about 150 wedding guests.

The bride, who was attended by Mrs. Carl Buck, of Detroit, as matron of honor, and by two little flower girls, entered with James C. Otis, who was formerly the business partner of her father, the late William A. Heath. She was strikingly beautiful in a gown of ivory cream silk lace over a flesh colored georgette and chiffon, girdled with palest pink satin. Mrs. Buck was in white lace and carried pink roses and the maid, Mary Fritsch, carried a basket of white flowers.

Lieutenant Reiss was attended by Lieutenant Helmut Biele, of Camp Jackson, as best man, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mark Carlisle, pastor of the Washington Street Methodist church.

The regular meeting of Atlanta review, No. 1, of the Woman's Benefit association, will be held this afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock at Forsyth hall.

Circle No. 1, of the Atlanta Child's home, will meet with Mrs. Goodie Yancy, 131 Springdale road, Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock.

The bride is well known and prominently connected in Atlanta, being a nephew of the late W. A. Austell, and has often visited the city as guest of Mr. and Mrs. Austell.

Community Sewing Room Holds Sale Today.

Everything is in readiness for the community sewing room sale that is to be held today at the Y. W. C. A., fourth floor, Peachtree Arcade. Sheets will be sold at $1.00 each. They are of regulation size, made of the best material and as well made as good seamstresses using sewing machines can make them. All knots are tied and there are no rough frays in the hems. Pillow cases are 80 cents a pair. Bungalow and house aprons vary in price, but the quality and work are equal in finish to the bed linen.

The day will be pleasant socially. The Y. W. C. A. clubroom is well adapted to the sale and is ample in space and comfort for the friends of Atlanta's churches to meet informally and at the same time to be aiding in a worthy cause.

Haynes-Jones.

The marriage of Miss Lucille Haynes and John E. Jones took place Saturday afternoon at the home of Rev. Robert H. Lamkin, on Angier avenue.

Miss Annie Jones was the bride's only attendant and Clarence Haynes acted as best man.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Jones will be at home to their friends on Kirkwood avenue.

Ruth Bryan Owen Will Speak Here For Woman's Club

Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of William Jennings Bryan, said to be the finest woman speaker in the country, is to speak in Atlanta at the Metropolitan theater on March 23 at 11 o'clock in the morning.

Mrs. Owen, whose husband, Major Owen, was in the British army and who took Jerusalem, has had many wonderful cultural opportunities and much broadening travel, having been around the world and made frequent journeys into little-known, as well as the usually routed countries of Europe, Africa and Asia. She enjoyed the opportunity of studying for her lecture work with her father, considered by many people America's finest orator.

Mrs. Owen will speak on the "Modern Arabian Nights." She will be presented under the auspices of the educational committee of the Atlanta Woman's club, of which Mrs. T. T. Stevens is chairman.

Mrs. Owen will be presented by the educational committee to take the place of Irvin Cobb, who was prevented from coming to Atlanta on account of illness.

The educational committee of the Atlanta Woman's club will use the funds raised to carry on its work with the Tallulah Falls Industrial school, for the Celeste Parrish scholarship at the University of Georgia and for other educational improvements to which it is pledged.

Admission to the lecture will be 75 cents.

Opera Pagliacci Will Be Presented At Howard Today

Costumed in a gown of the Italian peasant type copied after the one which Geraldine Farrar wore in the character of Nedda in Leoncavallo's opera, "Pagliacci," Mrs. Earl Sherwood Jackson will interpret the dramatic role tomorrow morning at the Howard theater, when the Atlanta Woman's club will present the second of the series of opera musicales under the direction of Enrico Leide and Mrs. Charles Chalmers.

In the second act Mrs. Jackson will wear a Columbine costume to add color to the Columbine music.

"Pagliacci" is a play within a play, carrying a tragic theme, and is considered one of the most dramatic of the Italian operas. Written by the composer of "Zaza," this opera has long been a favorite and has been the medium for the greatest singers.

Miss Frances Woodberry, a leading singer in Atlanta and a pupil of the late Madame Benard, will sing "Bella Tullia" (bird song). Miss Woodberry has recently received instruction under the direction of Enrico Leide, who has charge of the music for the opera musicales.

Club Women to Hear World Service Address

"World Service for Women" will be the subject of an address by Mrs. Katherine Eddy, of New York, just returned from Europe and Asia in the course of an international survey, who will be the principal speaker at a meeting Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Albert E. Thornton.

Officers of the City Federation of Women's Clubs, chairmen of departments, and presidents of the clubs are invited, the meeting to be opened promptly at 3 o'clock.

oper musicals. She has a beautiful dramatic soprano voice.

Foster Barnes, baritone, will sing the prologue. Mr. Barnes sang in the opera musicales at the Howard last year and has appeared in a number of musical productions. He is a member of the Emory glee club, which has recently completed a successful tour, and is the baritone at the Pont de Leon Baptist church.

Byron Warner, also a leading member of the Emory Glee club, will sing the tenor roles. Mr. Warner delighted a large audience last week with his numbers from "Carmen" and Tuesday morning will sing the "Harlequin Song" from Pagliacci.

The Howard orchestra, under the direction of Enrico Leide, will play the leading musical numbers interpolated with the reading of the drama, thus presenting the opera as a whole.

A few moments will be devoted in tribute to Caruso, the great tenor who immortalized the "Soft Song" from Pagliacci. A Caruso record of this song will be played on the victrola with the accompaniment of the Howard orchestra.

The performance starts promptly at 10:30. Single seats are 50 cents. The

Dance at Capital City Club Follows 'Follies' Performance

The supper-dance at the Capital City club Monday evening, following the performance of the Junior League Follies at the Atlanta theater, proved to be a brilliant social event, assembling several hundred members of society, including the entire cast of the Follies, members of which contributed gaiety to the occasion.

Adorning the individual tables, which were placed at intervals around the ballroom, were dainty baskets of jonquils and narcissi. Balloons of orchestra rendered the musical program for dancing, which was enjoyed until 2 o'clock.

Among those present were Misses Marion Smith, Grace Goldsmith, Mary Nevin, Nellie Dodd, Katharine Dickey, Catharine Hook, Dunlap, Sam Schoon, Margaret Whitman, Erskine Jarman, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Gatin, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hatcher, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Chester B. Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

I happened to be at a friend's house the other evening when her husband came home and announced that one of the officials of the firm for which he works would be in town some time in the coming month and that they would probably entertain him.

My friend has a lovely home and plenty of service, so that did not mean to her what it means to the woman who wonders at once if she can't manage to get those much needed new draperies for the guest room, and whether she can get the neighborhood accommodation to come in and serve the meals during the visit.

"Wouldn't it be terrible if—" And yet a shadow passed at once over her face. "Oh, dear," she said, "I do hope that he won't happen to come at the same time the Farleys are in town. You know they did so much for us when we were away this summer and we said so much about entertaining them when they came to town. Wouldn't it be terrible if they should happen to come the very same time he is here and we couldn't entertain them? That would be just my luck."

Now, fond as I am of this woman, I must admit that that reaction is typical of her.

Her first thought on hearing anything new seems almost always to be a fear thought.

She is always saying, "suppose this or that should happen." In short she has the fixed habit of fear and it colors all her outlook on life.

Until she knows.

Of course it is possible that the two might coincide and that embarrassment might arise.

But the ordinary person would never think of that contingency until it presented itself and would there by avoid that mere apprehension.

If my friend's fears translated themselves into action to avert the thing she fears, that would be another thing. But they seldom do; by the nature of things that is often impossible. If anything, they make her less capable of dealing with any difficulties that arrive because fear always clouds the mind and faculties.

Set the Hope Reaction.

A great many people, I think, have this instinctive fear reaction. It can be overcome and it should be overcome for the sake of one's happiness and efficiency. You can't control events by this, but you can fill your life with the stimulus of hope instead of the depression of fear.

Mrs. Gottschaldt Is Honored.

Mrs. Allen Gottschaldt was honored guest at a luncheon Monday at the Capital City club, given by her mother, Mrs. W. H. Smith.

Empress josselyn in a silver basket decorated the center of the table, and cards, hand-painted in josselyn, marked the guests' places.

Mrs. Gottschaldt wore a gown of midnight blue Canton crepe, and her hat of blue straw was trimmed in henna. Mrs. Smith wore black Canton crepe, and black straw hat.

Mrs. Gottschaldt will leave at an early date for Baltimore, where she will join Mr. Gottschaldt, and they will make that city their home.

HE DARKENED HIS GRAY HAIR

Tells How He Did It.

Mr. J. A. McCrea, a well-known resident of California, who was called Daddy and Grandpa on account of his white hair, and who darkened it with a home-made mixture, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and 1-4 ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off."—(adv.)

TORTOISE SHELL TRIMS BOTH HAT AND PURSE

Whether you prefer harmony or contrast in your costume is a matter strictly up to you. However, Persian overtones do exert an influence and many sticklers for contrast are apt to jump to the harmony side of the fence because of the smart distinction of a matching set of flat envelope purse and hat made of brown braid, tortoise shell trimmed.

WHAT'S WHAT

By Helen Dele

Young men living in a college or a boarding house away from home should not forget the courtesy due to the "strangers" who make up their temporary family circle. A young man may be as reserved as he chooses. He may be pleasant to all acquaintances and familiar with none, but the chances are that he will not balance matters quite so ideally.

It is natural to form friendships in youth, and friendship implies confidence. To be distrustful of every move of a proven friend is as unwise as it is irritating. If, for instance, a new friend has borrowed a book to read, it is proper to wait a reasonable time for its return. If the borrowed volume is unreturned at the end of a month, it is then time enough to ask for it. But to inquire for it the next day or even the next day is suspicious and is always bad manners.

The Housewife's Idea Box

Installment No. 76.

"I WISH—"

At Jeanne's exclamation, "my house!" Barstow turned to her curiously.

"What do you mean?"

She flushed guiltily.

"Nothing! How absurd I am! It's only that I saw a place just like this in a dream."

She did not add that it was a day dream.

"Queen coincidence," commented Barstow, "is a reach of a place I'd like to live in. It gives you a warm, cozy feeling around your heart—and that's something none of Dad's plans could give."

He helped her out of the car, and walked with her through the little latched gateway up the gravel path to a quaint little portico, flanked by two slender young trees, and the old-fashioned brass knocker, and the door was opened quickly by a trim, pretty little woman in a blue linen frock. Her bright hair was simply arranged, and her face was guileless of cosmetics.

She smiled as wholeheartedly as a housewife could, and held out a ringless hand to Jeanne.

"You're Mrs. Barstow, aren't you? I'm so glad you came. Jim phoned he'd be out this afternoon. He has been detained in town, but will be home later. Do come in."

Jeanne presented Barstow, and followed her into a warm living room, where the fire burned cheerily on the hearth. The sun dropping low in the west, shone slantingly through the quaint, diamond-paned windows, high in the wall, and cast diamond-shaped reflections on the dark polished floor, strewn with small colorful rugs. There were the low bookshelves of her dream, running the length of each wall; the settled with bright-colored cushions flanking the fireplace; the graceful silver candlesticks, and the flowers in low bowls—just as she had dreamed.

Bewildered, she seated herself in the chair her hostess drew up to the fire, and permitted Barstow to relieve her of her wraps. Mechanically she stripped off her gloves, and accepted the tea and jam sandwiches and plum cake which the little Mrs. Barstow dispensed from a tea table.

She wanted to pinch herself to be sure she was not in a dream world. It seemed incredible that in this chance visit she should find the things which represented "home" to her in that moment of fine revelation when she had bathed herself and the life she was leading.

Her hostess chatted with a hint

Who's Who in the Story.

Jeanne (Jane) Darr, beautiful, clever, but poor, desires to please everything to achieve a wealthy marriage, and after raising all the money she can through mortgages, savings, and her own efforts, she is introduced to her husband's world.

Richard Cawley, wealthy broker and man about town, who is attracted by her beauty, and introduces her into his set, in which are Adele Parkins, a young widow and former friend of Jeanne's, and Victor Barstow, young, handsome, debonair, only son of a millionaire, whom Jeanne meets at a party.

The family circle to Jeanne, because she is without credit, but she, indulging in one mad extravagance after another, despite the fact that Barstow has given her his last cent in savings, and takes her worthless property in exchange, wins them over, and Jeanne is able to buy a new dress.

After the honeymoon spent on the Barstow yacht, she returns to face her numerous creditors, only to find that her husband is not the heir to the fortune she had dreamed of. Jeanne is left with a large debt, and she is forced to sell her jewelry and her house to pay it.

Before the tea and plum cake were exhausted, there was a chime of the bell from the garden, and quick, firm steps on the path.

"Excuse me," the little bride sprang up from her post behind the tea table and hurried to the door.

"You're late, dear," she greeted the newcomers. "Your friends have been here some time."

There was a moment of silence, when Jeanne knew without turning her head, that Mrs. Franklin had lifted her lips for her husband to kiss.

"Hello, folks! This is darn nice of you."

Franklin strode into the room, a smile of welcome on his clean, ruddy face.

"It's fine to meet you, Mrs. Barstow. I didn't know old Vic had joined his office today. You sure are a splendid old man."

He turned to Barstow, grinning.

"And you," said the latter smiling.

"You have more than a charming head, that's for sure. I have only the charming wife."

"Well, it's your own fault if you don't have both," said Franklin. "It isn't my fault, but I'm a good fixer. I'll fix it up, too. We worked nights to do this, didn't we, sweet-heart?" he addressed his little blue-eyed wife.

She nodded, busy with the tea things.

"I've kept tea hot for you, dear, and there are some cookies in the pantry if you don't like the plum cake. Shall I get them?"

Franklin gave Barstow a comical wink.

"After see anyone spoil me the way she does?"

Mrs. Barstow smiled and passed over her husband's cup of tea.

"Well, I don't think enough of each other to build up a home, most divorces are bred in hotels and modern apartments."

"I think you're a mouthful," said Barstow soberly. "You've got a great little place here."

"I wish it was ours," she said.

Barstow looked down at her incredulously, but Franklin said calmly: "Well, you can't see it for the trees, but it's identical to the last nail."

"I wish—" began Jeanne impulsively.

She looked up to meet Barstow's eager, pleading eyes.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

To Remove Machine Grease.

A teaspoonful of ammonia in cold water and pure soap will take out machine grease without danger of color running.

Fruit Pie.

Before putting fruit in the inside crust, brush the crust thoroughly with an egg and the juice will not soak through as it bakes.

Protect Your Curtains.

When running curtains on a rod a thumb or a finger of an old glove over the end of the curtain cord will prevent the curtain from catching on the sharp edges and tearing.

Ends for Shoe Laces.

When the tips come of shoe laces, dip the ends of the laces in the little melted paraffin or sealing wax, and shape between the fingers. It will make them as good as new, and be a great saving on the disposition.

Kitchen Logic.

Scalding water, poured over a fish, will make it scale more easily.

Never buy a fowl that shows the slightest tinge of green on the flesh.

Never actually boil soup; let it simmer, and the flavors will blend better.

It is bits of soap should be saved. A little water poured over them will make soft soap.

Before baking potatoes, rub them over with a little oil, which will make them glossy and tasty.

Luncheon Honors Miss Ida Brittain And Miss Stephens

Miss Ida Brittain and Miss Evelyn Stephens, two lovely brides-elect, were honor guests at the luncheon given Monday at the Capital City club by Miss Lucy Davis.

Covers were laid for Miss Stephens, Miss Brittain, Miss Davis, Miss Frances Powell, Miss Louise Campbell, Miss Dorothy Bates, Miss Margaret Horton, Miss Louise Sullivan, Miss Elizabeth Shevane, Miss Mable Branch Powers, Mrs. William A. Speer, Mrs. LeRoy Stevens and Mrs. W. J. Davis.

The lace-covered luncheon table was adorned with a silver basket holding pink roses, narcissus and anemones, and alternating with silver candlesticks holding unshaded pink candles were small silver vases holding pink roses. Hand-painted cards of brides and bridesmaids marked the place of each guest, and vanity boxes, hand-painted in Dresden figures, were presented as favors to the brides-elect and their guests.

Miss Davis was gowned in blue Canton crepe, and her hat was of sand-colored straw.

Miss Brittain's gown was of navy blue Canton crepe, trimmed with fringe, and her hat was of straw in the periwinkle shade.

Miss Stephens wore blue tulle, and her hat was of red straw.

Women Voters Of Ninth Ward Will Give Tea

Members and friends of the Atlanta League of Women Voters living in the ninth ward will be delighted to entertain this afternoon at a tea to be given at the Atlanta Woman's club from 3 to 4:30 o'clock.

Other guests will include league chairmen from all other wards.

Receiving will be Mrs. Mary M. Raoul, Mrs. Ed A. Pierce, chairman of the ninth ward, Mrs. Fred Hodgson, chairman of the Druid Hills district, Mrs. J. E. Foster, first vice chairman, Mrs. A. P. Calhoun, secretary, and ninth ward district leaders who include Mrs. W. A. Arnold, Mrs. W. C. Stephens, Mrs. P. W. Jones, Miss Annie Dowling, Mrs. George Price, Mrs. John Pugh, Mrs. Elizabeth P. Oliver, Mrs. J. O. McDowell, Mrs. Joseph H. Williams and Mrs. L. B. Williams.

Speakers will be introduced by Mrs. J. H. Gibbs. Of much interest will be the talk by Mrs. B. M. Boykin, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, concerning the value of the woman vote. Another prominent speaker will be Dr. Ashby Jones, who will speak on the subject of "The woman's vote."

Refreshments will be served.

Bridge-Tea Given For Mrs. Blythe.

Mrs. James Blythe, of Boston, formerly Miss Bessie Jones, of Atlanta, attractive guest of Mrs. Brooks Morgan, was honor guest at the informal bridge-tea given by Mrs. Malcolm Fleming, at her home on East Seventeenth street, Monday afternoon.

Vases holding jonquils and ferns decorated the apartments where bridge was played. In the dining room, the new-covered tea table had for the central decoration a silver basket holding jonquils. Yellow, unshaded candles in silver candlesticks, encircled the central decoration. Yellow and white bouquets were placed in silver compotes. French desk sets, in pink brocade, were given as prizes to each table, while the honor guest was presented with a silk sandwood fan.

Mrs. Fleming was gowned in black satin. Mrs. Blythe wore blue satin, beaded in conventional design, and her hat was of blue straw.

Study Club To Give Dance.

The Fulton Lodge Masonic Study club will give its second annual dance Tuesday evening, at 8:30 o'clock. All members of the Fulton lodge, No. 216, are cordially invited to attend and bring their wives, mothers, daughters and lady friends.

The dance will be given at Roseland, and the orchestra will be one of the best in the city. A special program has been arranged.

Mothers' Club of Ansley Park to Meet.

The Mothers' club of the Ansley Park kindergarten, will have its regular monthly meeting in the Misses VanHook's studios, 48 Inman circle, Wednesday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock. Parents of children in kindergarten and afternoon classes are reminded of the change of date from the fourth Wednesday to the third.

The Children's Hour

When the party becomes a trifle noisy, try letting the children make the whistling play. A small rattle offered for the best one will work like magic.

Give each child a bag of peanuts and let them sit around a table, and pick out five large peanuts and three small ones. Show them how to make a peanut butter sandwich, and then through a small one for the body; then through a small one for the head. The third leg is made the same as the first. Then the needle is put through the body and head again. The two strings coming from the head hold the queue, which is made of braided worsted. For the arms the needle is put through the end of the peanut, then through the body, and finally through the end of the other peanut. Straps of silk will make very nice clothes for the "nutty" children. The eyes, nose and mouth are put in with ink.

A Wife on Leave

Who's Who and What's Happened.

Richard Babash, a successful young lawyer, has given a year's leave of absence to his wife, Sally, who is going to Europe to study law.

Keith Gilbert, always known as "dangerous" through his association with New York's gayest crowd of celebrities of the artistic world, among them Lee Craig, a pretty artist, Guy Selwyn, a playwright, and Graham Brown, a financier, Gilbert makes no secret of his love for her, and she is his only wife.

Patricia Loring, a modern dancer, makes any sort of her fondness for him, Sally, who is a dance club with Barbara Lane, who is an old-fashioned wife, and her husband and their quest. Neal Calhoun, and there are Gilbert with Patricia Calhoun, intimates that Gilbert is not a man whom Sally should know. Sally learns that her husband, who had gone west, has been his party secretary with him, and is so piqued by the knowledge that she has been deceived in a home-party at The Ritz, his country place. The evening of her arrival she sees her husband's lights on the river and sees signals from the house. A strange man appears to arrest her, and he is looking for her. She escapes to a launch on the river, taking Sally with her. Barbara and Andy guard the launch. Sally and Andy come home for dinner, and Barbara discovers she is dining at a neighbor's.

CHAPTER XXVI.

A Precarious Situation.

Sally and Keith Gilbert in sudden revulsion of feeling. Kidnapped! To go with him to the Bahamas islands whether she wanted to or not—it was impossible.

Yet there was nothing she could do. She knew that they were somewhere out on the river, but she could not tell where. She knew that they were somewhere out on the river, but she could not tell where. She knew that they were somewhere out on the river, but she could not tell where.

She had never looked more beautiful. Her flame-colored gown was torn and bedraggled from her climb down the bank, and her hair, which had been pulled down, fell to her shoulders.

"Don't be foolish, Sally," he urged her at last, when she sank down on the bank, and he saw her hair falling. "You know you like me—you said this afternoon that if you weren't married you'd fall in love with me. You know that I'm crazy about you and always have been. Well, be reasonable. When he hears that you've gone off to the West Indies with me, your husband will divorce you, and you can—"

"Stop—I won't listen!" she cried, jerking away from the hand that he had laid on her shoulder. "I won't divorce me; he'd know that I'd never run away with another man, never!"

"He took his charming secretary west with him," supplied Keith. "So what you may or may not do matters very little, no doubt. Oh, don't look surprised. I've known you before, Sally. The fires are burnt out in you and Dick, my dear child; the sooner you recognize that fact, the better it will be for you both. This marriage of yours to him was merely a matter of education—first marriages usually are! Don't be a sentimental little fool and try to stick to a man who has been so good to you. Remember, dear, I love you!"

That afternoon she had been thrilled when he spoke thus, and she had said, "I won't divorce him." But now she realized the difference in his regard for her and Dick's; she saw that to him she was a pretty plaything, something a man who had suddenly become a stranger. He was sitting back looking at her appraisingly, his hazel eyes more cynical than she had ever seen them before. Suddenly she realized the difference in his regard for her and Dick's; she saw that to him she was a pretty plaything, something a man who had suddenly become a stranger.

And now here she was, in this launch out on the river somewhere, alone with a man who had suddenly become a stranger. He was sitting back looking at her appraisingly, his hazel eyes more cynical than she had ever seen them before. Suddenly she realized the difference in his regard for her and Dick's; she saw that to him she was a pretty plaything, something a man who had suddenly become a stranger.

"I won't divorce him," she said defiantly. "I'll never love you!"

Today's Short Story

BY AD SCHUSTER.

JIMMY

Jimmy, a wire-haired fox terrier, had his name written in many books. As a show dog he had brought his master a score of more cups and his strain won a reputation for the North of England. He was alert, tense and handsome—and the meanest tempered animal one could find.

"That dog has just two missions in life," Phil Norwood used to say. "One is to catch rats, and the other to catch cats. As a pet he is as valuable as a snapping tiger and as a friend to man he is entirely lacking."

When Jimmy grew older he lost the lines that make the champion. In the kennels where other dogs were being groomed for the shows, Jimmy lost out on four feet, and thrust his muzzle down with the old wary of the killer. His eyes spread wide and his ears were glazed, but there was strength enough in one shake to break the back of the rat.

Jimmy threw the rat over his shoulder, dropped his head and fell. Norwood came in, saw the rat, and saw Jimmy's front legs responded to the will and he dragged the others across the floor. The blood of the champion was all but dead, answered the challenge. Norwood watched, fascinated, as the terrier fell, arose and struggled on.

BEAUTY CHATS

ANSWERED LETTERS

Knicks—If your hair becomes too before it is time for the regular wash, dust a little powdered orris through it and let it remain for a few minutes while it absorbs some of the oil, after which give the hair a thorough shaking out in the fresh air, if that is possible.

James C. A.—Mark left from a should not be a difficult thing to eradicate any more. Consult some doctor who specializes on skin treatment or go to any of the hospitals for advice. In this same way you can obtain advice regarding the crooked finger joint.

Anburn—You can regain that autumn tint in your hair by using henna in the shampoo. If you send a addressed envelope I shall be glad to mail you directions.

Henry—Massage will remove the which under the chin, which should be followed by an astringent. With the palm of the hand, begin at the base of the throat and make an upward stroke to the end of the chin. The motion is somewhat like ironing. Repeat it many times until all the scales have been thoroughly exfoliated. The astringent following this may be merely an ice rub or any reliable mixture for contracting and hardening the skin.

Reader—The mixtures made from honey and almonds will often agree with the skin when glycerine will not. These ingredients are best for the hands and not for the complexion.

P. H. O.—I shall be glad to mail you a formula for improving the skin if you send me a stamped addressed envelope.

Anxious—Cocoa butter will not encourage a growth of hair on the body, but sometimes does on the face. How-

KNICKERS IT MUST BE, WHETHER COOL OR WARM

Not everybody did it last season, but about everybody will wear knickers this year and especially for golf. It is a toss up whether you wear tweeds or linens—better have both and be fixed for cool days and sweltering ones.

Mrs. Camp Is Hostess.

Mrs. F. H. Camp entertained members of the Deana club recently. Ferns and other pot flowers were used in decorating. A flower bowl was won by Mrs. James Stone for top score. Mrs. S. S. Howie received the consolation, two silk handkerchiefs.

Besides the regular members there were several visitors, including Mrs. Coughlin, Mrs. O. J. Bishop, Mrs. J. W. Camp and Mrs. James H. Hudson, the new member.

D. A. R. Meeting On Wednesday.

Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., will hold its regular monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in St. Mark's church, corner Peachtree and Fifth streets. All members are urged to attend.

WILL ERECT BUILDING AT COST OF $60,000

A modern 2-story brick business building will be erected at the southwest corner of West Peachtree and West Peachtree place, by Charles W. Tway, local automobile distributor, at an approximate cost of $60,000, it was learned Monday.

The plans become known when the M. C. Kiser Realty company, with offices in the Candler building, announced that one-half of the structure has been leased to the Quick Tire service, for a period of 10 years.

The property fronts 72 feet on West Peachtree street and 138 feet on West Peachtree place. The lease to the tire concern was handled for the Kiser agency by T. J. Woods. Half of the building will be occupied by the Atlanta Haynes company, at the present located at 254 Peachtree street.

PREFERENCE GIVEN TO EX-SERVICE MEN IN EXAMINATIONS

Preference is being given to ex-service men, the wives and widows of ex-service men and ex-service men in service examinations throughout the country, it was learned from the civil service commission headquarters in the federal building Monday afternoon.

Such preference is in compliance with the deficiency act, passed by congress on July 11, 1919.

An honorarium discharge from the army, navy or marine corps on all that is necessary to give an applicant a rating many points higher than that of other persons not so qualified. According to section 2 of civil service rule 4, it is provided that:

"All competitors rated at 70 or more shall be eligible for appointment, and their names shall be placed on the proper register, according to their ratings, but the names of persons preferred under the urgent deficiency act, according to section 2, of civil service rule 4, it is provided that:

In this way Uncle Sam is caring for his fighting men, while senators hargue over the bonus bill, pro and con.

No age limit is imposed upon applicants who receive a preferred rating, it is said. Applicants who are rated are not subject to the appointment clause which provides that a certain number shall be admitted to the service from each state or territory.

150 BUSINESS MEN OF NEW YORK CITY TO VISIT ATLANTA

One hundred and fifty business men of New York city will stop off in Atlanta for a day's outing May 6 next, primarily to obtain a perspective of economic conditions in the south. It was announced Monday by B. S. Barker, secretary of the chamber of commerce, who received a letter from J. F. Barry, editor of The New York Commercial, containing information of the proposed visit.

Plans are being formulated by Mr. Barker and Fred Houser, secretary of the Atlanta convention bureau, to entertain the visitors with a banquet and carry them on an automobile ride over the city. In the party will be a number of this country's wealthiest men, who are contemplating a tour of the United States and Mexico.

The party plans to stop off in all of the principal cities along their itinerary to gain first-hand information of actual business conditions. They will visit Mexico City and sail from Vera Cruz, after having completed their tour, for New York.

D. O. K. K. MINSTREL ARTISTS PREPARE TO GIVE BIG SHOW

A minstrel show will be given at the Atlanta theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 6, 7 and 8, at Kibla Temple No. 123, Dramatic Order Knights of Khorassan. Tickets for the show may be had from R. E. Brooks, chairman finance committee, of the Atlanta National bank; Charles G. Gillett, at the city hall; B. L. Owens, secretary, at the courthouse; Lee F. Terrell, of 39 Peachtree Arcade; or any member of the temple. An auto and a handsome diamond ring will be given away.

Rehearsals are being held daily of the 100 people in the show. The purpose of the minstrel is to raise funds to send the degree team, band and drum corps to Portland, Ore., in September, 1922.

The Dramatic Order of Knights of Khorassan is the higher branch of the Knights of Pythias. Kibla Temple No. 123 is one of the largest in the south and the membership continues to grow.

CHAMBER WILL GIVE DINNER FOR BABSON

Directors of the chamber of commerce will act as hosts to Roger Babson, prominent international business expert, at a dinner party to be held in the Capital City club Friday night, March 24, the date of Mr. Babson's appearance here at Taft hall under the auspices of the forum committee of the chamber, it was announced Monday following a meeting of the directors.

At the dinner Mr. Babson will deliver an address on "Productive Quits," one of his pet subjects. It is expected that an attendance of more than fifty officials and former directors of the chamber will turn out to greet Mr. Babson.

Girls of Y. W. C. A.

Hear Mrs. Eddy On Foreign Work

Seventy-five young girls of the association listened closely for one hour at the Y. W. C. A., Peachtree Arcade, Monday night as Mrs. Katherine Eddy of the world service council of the national Y. W. C. A., New York, told of the work being done by the national association in foreign fields. Mrs. Eddy has made four tours to the Orient, including the past summer, when she made a tour of Europe and the Orient to study conditions of women.

The local girls were interested in her stories of foreign girls and their needs. Mrs. Eddy stated that the national Y. W. C. A. never enters a country to open an association center until the missionary bodies have first extended the invitation. She said that the national association does not pay expenses of foreign work except salaries of Y. W. C. A. secretaries who are sent to do the work, the different countries having their own finance campaigns and paying their native workers as well as paying for their buildings.

Mrs. Eddy deplored the fact that the national Y. W. C. A. is not in financial condition to send secretaries to countries in proportion to the request coming for them.

MACON AND SAVANNAH ASK FOR LOWER GAS

Hearing on petitions of the city of Macon and the city of Savannah for a reduction in their gas rates, respectively, were concluded before the Georgia railroad commission Monday.

A similar petition of the city of Columbus will be heard Tuesday, and one from Augusta Wednesday. The commission will take all the cases under advisement, and will render its decision later.

In the Macon case, Judge W. H. Field, in his opinion for the Macon Gas Light company while Harry S. Strozier, city attorney of Macon, and Mrs. Charles C. Harold, member of the board of aldermen, represented consumers who are asking for lower rates.

Mr. Strozier declared that the gas rate in Macon is relatively higher than in other cities of like size. The charges being $1.75 for the first 10,000 cubic feet; $1.00 for the next 20,000; $1.50 for the next 20,000, and $1.40 for all in excess of 60,000. The minimum meter rate is $1.

The Macon Gas company based its contention for the present rate on the fact that it was granted by the Georgia railroad commission in August, 1920, was not as large as it should have been and as was asked for, and insisted that the rate in Macon was relatively higher than in other cities of like size.

Atlanta because freight rates to Macon are higher than those to Atlanta.

Jazz and Candy Feature Junior Chamber's Drive

Jazz and free candy at Five Points will feature the junior chamber's membership drive Tuesday. It was announced Monday evening at a special meeting of the campaign leaders that Wilson's jazz band had been secured for the purpose and that the Frank B. Block company had furnished 100 boxes of candy for free distribution as a drawing card to the downtown crowds.

The parade during the lunch hour, and the "Scrap Iron quartet," of the junior chamber, will render rag-time melodies. The jazz band will perform at 2:30 o'clock promptly, at Five Points.

Up to Monday night the total membership reported was 1,526, representing an increase over the week-end of 76 new members. A. R. Almond was the highest man, with a record of 21 members in the row.

The thermometer at the Five Points traffic tower is steadily climbing, and leaders express the hope that it will ring the bell at the top by Wednesday with the full quota of 2,000 members.

As soon as 500 new members have been obtained, it was announced, the teams would be disbanded and the wind-up of the campaign handled by the mop-up squad composed of Eugene Oberdorfer and Fred J. Westmoreland. The work of this outfit will be principally among the larger industrial plants and business houses in the city, where an endeavor will be made to bring in new members.

Already several well-known firms have pledged group memberships, and with the additions expected, the drive will be brought to a quick close.

Commenting on the membership campaign, President Oberdorfer stated Monday that both workers and leaders were greatly encouraged over the results of last week's efforts. While the original plan had been to round up the full quota of new members within a week's time, a splendid record had been made in spite of the rain and other conditions, that interfered with the program.

KLAN ARTICLES ARE RESTRICTED BY INSURGENTS

W. J. Simmons, imperial wizard, and other members of the Ku Klux Klan, who temporarily enjoined Judge George J. Bell in Fulton superior court Monday from writing or writing a series of articles to expose the alleged attacks of the insurgent faction of the order while the case is now pending in the courts.

Petition for this restraining order was filed Monday by Harry B. Terrell and Z. R. Upchurch, members of the insurgent faction of the order, through their attorney, W. H. Terrell. The petition declares that a recent newspaper article stated Mr. Simmons had signified his intentions of writing a series of articles in which he said he would expose the motives and methods of the insurgent faction.

KENNEDY RECOVERING FROM ATTACK OF FLU

J. Sheppard Kennedy, president of the Kiwanis club and cashier of the Atlanta National bank, is recovering from a serious attack of influenza, at his residence in Decatur. Mr. Kennedy was confined to his bed last Wednesday, but was able to sit up for a while Monday.

DRESS BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

The enormous hat makes a strong appeal to smart French women who take kindly to red combined with black.

Does fashion favor large hats or small merely as a matter of caprice? Or is it true that certain conditions are invariably favorable to the hat of enormous proportions and others favor the hat of miniature size?

As national costumery goes we naturally look for, and usually find, the wide-brimmed hat in the country where the sun is so bright that it is needed for the shade it casts to protect the face and eyes. That was obviously the way the Spanish sombrero assumed its picturesque proportions. The brimless Russian toques was the product of a northern, sun-starved country. The shaggy, thatched hat of the peasant in China was obviously built with its neatly peaked lines because it was then best adapted to shed the rain.

Every now and then someone tries to develop some theory of connection between the width or height of a woman's hats or head-dresses and the length of width of her skirts. It is on the strength of this sort of reasoning, which of course doesn't always apply to actual facts, that there has come about now the assured prediction that hats are going to take on increasing width. Obviously we are going to wear longer skirts even if we are not taking up with the fashion expeditiously, and long skirts demand wide hats.

And in Paris where the skirts are many inches longer than they are here, hats are already assuming great width. But it is quite conceivable that the milliners could launch a type of small hat that women would find entirely in the picture with the greatly lengthened skirt. If we really are getting the impulse for the new tendency in clothes from Meyer-Abe or Renaissance sources—as some good authorities assure us we are—then the headgear that does not increase the apparent width of the head would be quite consistent. For during the greater part of those historic periods women who followed the fashion at all wore no brims to their head-dresses. Brimmed hats were left to the less fortunate classes of women who had to work in the fields. The lady of the middle ages or the Renaissance shrouded the skin of her face and neck from the rays of the sun by means of ingeniously draped veils and capes.

And when European women did adopt the hat with a brim it was as a rather impertinent imitation of the fashions of their masculine betters! However, 500 years' experience has accustomed women to the wearing of hats—at least the women who follow the lead of civilized European usage.

Hardly anything that a woman might do by way of shaping or trimming hats would come as an actual novelty. But even Paris has gasped a little at the tremendous width of some of the very new hats that extend far beyond the line of the shoulder at either side.

The hat shown in the sketch is from Lewis and is certainly not unique in its size. It is in striking contrast to anything that Lewis was wearing out a season ago. It is of shiny black straw trimmed with red and black grapes. Large grapes, especially red grapes, used on black hats or black grapes used on red hats have already been seen enough to be classed in the category of the things "they are wearing" in this country.

It is the red facing of this Lewis model, however, that is most original and no one short of a Lewis would dare to offer so broad an expanse of brilliant hue for the background of a woman's face.

CUDAHY PACKING COMPANY OFFICE. ROBBED OF $500

Discovery that the safe of the Cudahy Packing company had been entered and robbed of $500 Sunday night was made shortly after 2 o'clock Monday morning, when the door was found open by a passing patrolman.

An investigation disclosed that the combination had been worked, and City Detectives Sturdivant and Campbell believe the work to be that of expert burglars. The thieves opened the front door by using a skeleton key. Several thousands of dollars in checks, in addition to registered securities, were left untouched by the burglars.

A shot at the top of the hill behind the wagon, a rush of galloping hoofs; another shot, and another. Below him, Mackenzie knew it was Joan before she came riding into the fire-light, throwing herself from the horse before it stopped. Through the haze of his despairing above the rebellious resentment of the thing that fate had played upon him this bitter gray morning; above the anguish of his hopeless moment, the poignant striving of his tortured soul to meet the end with resolution and calm defiance worthy a man—he had expected Joan. And so Joan had come, and she was leading him into the blessed free air.

Joan was painting, the knife that had cut his bonds fell open in her hand. They stood face to face, a little space between them, her great eyes pouring their terrified sympathy into his soul. Joan, shuddering as with cold, covered her white face with her hands and sobbed aloud.

"Joan! O Joan, Joan!"

"I knew they'd come tonight—I couldn't sleep."

"Thank God for your wakefulness!" said he.

Mackenzie put his hand to his face where the flames had licked it, and to the back of his head where his scorching hair broke crisply under his palm.

"It served me right; I stumbled into their hands like a blind kitten!" he said, not sparing himself of scorn.

"But if I'd have walked and watched like you, Joan, they wouldn't have got me. I started to watch, but I didn't keep it up like you. When I should have been awake, I was sleeping like a slug."

"The cowards!" said Joan.

"One of them was Hector Hall—he came after his gun. If I'd been a man, the shadow of a man, I'd made him swallow them the day I took the time he left them here."

"Matt was with him," said Joan.

"You couldn't do anything; no man could do anything, against Matt Hall."

A rider broke down the hillside as she spoke, riding near the wreckage of the burning wagon, where he halted a moment, the strong light of the fire on his face; Swan Carlson, hatless, his hair streaming, his great mustache pendant beneath his stony mouth.

"He came on toward them at once, Joan laid her hand on his arm, and said: 'You got a fire here,' said Swan."

"Yes," Mackenzie returned.

"I seen it from over there," said Swan.

"I come over to see if you need any help."

"Thank you, not now. It's gone; nothing can be done."

"I smell coal oil," said Swan, throwing back his head, sniffing the air like a buck. "Who done it?"

"Some of our neighbors," said Mackenzie.

"I knowed they would," Swan nodded. "Them fellows don't fight like me and you, they don't stand up like a man. When you see you take that seller by the leg that day and upset him off of his horse and grab his gun out of his hand, I knowed he'd burn you out."

Joan, forgetting her fear and dislike of Swan Carlson in her interest of what he revealed, drew a little nearer to him.

"Were you around here that day, Swan?" she asked.

"Yes, I saw him upset that fellow, little bird," Swan said, leaning again from his saddle, his long neck stretched to peer into her face. "He's a good man, but he ain't so good a man as me."

"There's nobody in this country like you, Swan," said Joan, pleased with him, friendly toward him, for his praise of Mackenzie.

"No, I can roll 'em all," Swan said.

"You ought to have all your man; when you'd have nobody no feller on this range would burn out."

"You've got a wife, Swan," Joan said, with a gentle reproach, putting the proposal from her as if she considered it a jest.

"I'm tired of that one," Swan confessed, frankly. "Then to Mackenzie, 'I'll fight you first.' He swung half way out of the saddle, as if to come to the ground and start the contest on the moment he hung there, the morning revealing the marks of his recent battle. 'Not now, you've had a fight already,' said Swan, settling back into the saddle. 'But when you brace up, then I'll fight you for her.'"

"What?"

"Any time," Mackenzie told him, speaking easily, as if humoring the whim of some irresponsible person.

With a sudden start of his horse, Swan rode close to Joan, Mackenzie, throwing himself between them, catching the bride, hurling the animal back. Swan did not take notice of the interference, only leaned far over and strained a long look into Joan's face. Then he whirled his horse and galloped away, not turning a glance behind.

Joan watched him go, saying nothing for a little while. Then:

"I think he's joking," Joan said.

"I suppose he is," Mackenzie agreed, although he had many doubts.

An hour after midday there came riding over the hills Tim Sullivan and a stranger. They stopped at the ruins of the sheep-wagon, where Tim dismounted and nosed around, then came on down the slope, where Mackenzie was ranging the sheep. Tim was greatly exercised over the loss of the wagon. He pitched into Mackenzie about as soon as he came within speaking distance. Mackenzie explained, briefly and in few words, how the wagon was fired, sparing his own notorious adventure and the part that Joan had borne in it. This slowed Tim down, and set him craning his neck over the counter to see if further threat of violence impended on the horizon.

The young man who rode with Tim was presented by him as Earl Reid, from Omaha, son of Malcolm Reid, an old range partner and friend. The young man had come out to learn the sheep business; Tim had brought him over for Mackenzie to break in. Dad Frazer was coming along with three thousand sheep, due to arrive in about a week. When he got there, the apprentice would split his time between them. Reid was rather a sophisticated looking youth of twenty-two or twenty-three, city broke, city manner. There was a poolroom palor about his thin face, a poolroom stoop to his thin shoulders, the Mackenzie did not like. But he was frank and ingenious in his manner, with a ready smile that redeemed his homely face, and a pair of blue eyes that seemed young and their innocence compared to the world-knowledge that his face betrayed.

"Take the horses down there to the creek and water 'em," Tim directed his new herder.

"That kid's no stranger to the range," Mackenzie said, more to himself than to Tim, as he watched him ride off.

"No, he used to be around with the cowboys on Malcolm's ranch when he was in the cattle business. He can handle a horse as good as you or me. Malcolm was the man that set me up in the sheep business; I started in with him like you're starting with me, more than thirty years ago. Kids been cuttin' up, throwin' away too much money; gettin' into scraps like a boy in town will, you know. Wild out and a big crop of 'em. The old man's staked him out with me for three years, and he ain't to draw one cent of pay, or have one cent to spend, in that time. If he breaks over, it's all off between them two. And the kid's sole heir to nearly half a million."

Mackenzie turned to look again at the boy, who was coming back with the horses.

"Do you think he'll stick?" he asked.

"Yes, he promised the old man he would, and if he's anything like Malcolm, he'll eat fire before he'll break his word. Malcolm and me, we come to terms in ten words. The kid's to work three years for me without pay; then I'll marry him to my Joan."

Mackenzie felt his blood come up his head and sink down his back, as his heart kick in one resolute surge, then fall away to weakness, as if its cords had been cut. Why, then, Tim mounted to leave, he looked round the range again with a drawing of trouble in his face.

"I ain't got another sheep-wagon to give you, right now, John; I guess you'll have to make out with a tent till winter," he said.

"I'd rather have it," Mackenzie replied.

CHAPTER VI

Matt Hall's End.

Dad Frazer was not overly friendly toward the young man from Omaha who had come out to learn the sheep business under the threat of penalties and the promise of all rewards. He growled around about him continually when he and Mackenzie met. Reid had been on the range about two weeks, but Mackenzie had not seen a great deal of him, owing to Tim's plan of keeping him out of the disputed territory, especially at night. That the young man did not care much for the company or instruction of Dad Frazer was plain. Twice he had asked Mackenzie to use his influence with Tim to bring about a change from the old man's camp to his.

Dad Frazer came over the hills to Mackenzie's range to stretch his legs, he said. He had left Reid in charge of his flock.

"I'm glad he takes to you," said Dad.

"I don't like him. He's too sharp for his years; he's seen too much of the kind of life a young fellow better off to be near about from a distance and never touch. I tell you, John, he ain't no good."

"I don't mind him," Mackenzie said. "Ship him over to me when you're tired of him."

"I'll send him this evening," said Dad. "Them dogs Joan give you's breakin' in to the sound of your voice wonderful, ain't they?"

"They're getting used to me slowly."

"Funny about dogs a woman's been runnin' sheep with. Mighty unusual they'll take up with a man after that. I used to be married to an Indian woman up on the Big Wind that was some hummer trainin' sheep-dogs. That woman could sell 'em for a hundred dollars apiece as fast as she could raise 'em and train 'em up, and them dispassioned colts they'd put near all come back home after she's sold 'em."

"She must have been a valuable woman to have around a man's camp."

"She was a good woman, one of the best women I ever had." Dad rubbed his chin. "I hated like snakes to lose that woman—her name was Little Handful of Rabbit Hair On A Rock. I shortened her down to Rabbit. I sure wish I had a couple of them sheep-dogs of her'n."

"Rabbit's still up there on the Big Wind waiting for you, is she?"

"She'll wait a long time. I'm done with Indians."

"Toward sundown Earl Reid came riding over, his winning smile as easy on his face as he was in the saddle. The days were doing him good, all around, toughening his face, taking the poolroom pastiness out of it, putting a bracer in his back. After supper they sat talking. Reid complained against the penance his father had set, looking ahead with consternation to the three years he must spend in those solitudes.

"But I'm goin' to stick," he said, an unshakable determination in his tone. "I'll show him they're making as good men now as they did when he was a kid." He laughed, a raucous, short laugh, an old man's laugh, which choked in a cigarette cough and made a mockery of mirth. "I'll toughen up out here and have better wind for the big finish when I sit on the old man's money. I guess you know about it?"

"Tim was telling me."

"You could do worse."

With this comforting reflection, Reid stretched himself on his blanket and went to sleep. Mackenzie was not slow in following his example, for it had been a hard day with the sheep, cracked his spine like a breaking icicle, Mackenzie believed he shouted, putting into his voice all that he felt of desperate need of help. And he saw young Reid strike, and felt the cruel hands relax, and fell down upon the ground like a dead man and knew no more.

Reid was there with the lantern, putting water on Mackenzie's head when he broke through the mists and followed the thread of his consciousness to his body. Mackenzie sat up presently, with throbbing head, a feeling of bulging in his eyeballs, his neck stiff from the wrenching it had received. The great body of the man whom he had fought lay stretched in the moonlight, face to the ground. The camp butcher knife was sticking in his back. Mackenzie got to his feet.

"I owe you one for that; I'll not forget it in a hurry," he said, giving Reid his hand.

"No, we're even on it," Reid returned. "He'd broke my neck in another second if you hadn't made that attack. Who is he, do you know?"

"Turn him over," Mackenzie said. Reid withdrew the knife, sticking it killer you've heard about. Look, he's all over blood—there's wool on his shirt."

On the sheep ranges Mackenzie's fight with Swan Carlson had taken second place, his reputation as a fighting man had paled almost to nothing, after Reid's half-handed dealing with Matt Hall. Hector Hall, brother of the slain man, seemed to accept the tragedy with a sorrowful resignation in which no shadow of revenge appeared. He let it be known that Matt had been irresponsible at times, given to night prowls and outbreaks of violence in strange and fantastic forms. But Mackenzie did not trust him. He made a requisition on Tim Sullivan at once for revolvers for himself and Reid.

"Well, I come over to see if you'll lend Reid to me three or four days while I make a trip to town," said Dad one day. "I've got a little business over there to tend to I've been putting off for more than a month."

"Yes, if it's all right with Tim you can have him," said Mackenzie.

"Kind of arrangin' John, kind of arrangin'." There's a widow lady over at Four Corners I used to rub that needs a man to help her with sheep. A man might as well marry a sheep ranch as one of these days."

against his breast. Mackenzie tore at the great stiff arms with his last desperate might, perhaps staying a little the pressure that in a moment more must snap his spine. As the assassin tightened his terrible grip, Mackenzie's face was lifted toward the sky. Behind him, he saw the sheep-

S. S. S. Fills Out Hollow Cheeks, Thin Limbs!

Men and women—whether you will ever build yourself up to your normal, just-right weight depends on the number of blood-cells in your blood. That's all there is to it. It's a scientific fact.
If your blood-cell factory isn't working right, you will be run-down, thin, your blood will be in disorder, and perhaps your face will be broken out with pimples, blackheads and eruptions.
S. S. S. keeps your blood-cell factory working full time. It helps build new blood-cells. That's why
S. S. S. builds up thin, run-down people, it puts firm flesh on your bones, it rounds out your face, arms, neck, limbs, the whole body. It puts the "pink" in your cheeks. It takes the hollowness from the eyes and it fools
Father Time by smoothing out wrinkles in men and women by "plumping" them up. S. S. S. is a remarkable blood-purifier. While you are getting plump, your skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, acne, rheumatism, rash, tetter, blotches are being removed.
The medicinal ingredients of S. S. S. are guaranteed purely vegetable.
S. S. S. is sold at all drug stores, in two sizes. The larger size is the more economical.

Parent-Teachers Ask Junior High At Maddox Park

A resolution was adopted Monday by the Parent-Teacher association of the English Avenue school, asking the board of education to locate one of the junior high schools in Maddox park, and a resolution was adopted urging abandonment of the present wooden annex and erection of a new fireproof annex.

The association also adopted a resolution addressed to the Carnegie library board asking that the new fifth ward branch of the Carnegie library be christened the "Emily Mills" library, in honor of the mother of Oscar Mills, a member of the board of Edmon county commissioners, which gave liberally toward the building. The resolution will be presented at a meeting of the board at 5:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

In asking for one of the junior high schools the parent-teacher members state that only a small part of Maddox park, which contains 88 acres, is now used for park purposes. It is also pointed out that in the event of a merger of the city and county systems the school would be located to serve not only a big city section, but a large and thickly populated county district.

Another resolution, passed at the meeting urges the white women of the ward to register.

Mrs. A. C. Burton is president of the association. She and Mrs. Nannie Bright were elected as delegates to the forthcoming state convention of parent-teacher associations, at Columbus.

"DISTRICT SCHOOL" WILL BE REPEATED

the last staging of the play, so large was the attendance.
